Fine art is that in which the hand, the head and the heart go together. The head conceives an idea, the heart fills it with emotions and the hand gives artistic shape to the idea. Fine art, like a triangle, is the result of physical, intellectual and emotional streams working together in such a way that the resultant work or piece of art is a thing of beauty and a source of inspiration forever. Whenever there is incoherence or incompatibility among the three agents of human personality, there is bound to be distortion and disturbance, both in the imaginative as well as in the creative processes. The concentration of the head, hand and their intensity and intention supplement each other's efforts covert or overt, is the prerequisite of all fine art. An artist is known for the potential of his feelings and reactions to the happiness outside and inside. There should not be any conflict between ideas and emotions. If it is, it would bring forth not a specimen of fine art but a lame and limping outburst.

2. What are the functions of head, heart and hand in producing an art?
3. Write the factors which spoil the real art.

At this stage of civilization, when many nations are brought in to close and vital contact for good and evil, it is essential, as never before, that their gross ignorance of one another should be diminished, that they should begin to understand a little of one another's historical experience and resulting mentality. It is the fault of the English to expect the people of other countries to react as they do, to political and international situations. Our genuine goodwill and good intentions are often brought to nothing because we expect other people to be like us. This would be corrected if we knew the history, not necessarily in detail but in broad outlines, of the social and political conditions which have given to each nation its present character.
