That night Buddha repaired to the threshold of his wife's chamber and thereby the dim lamp, he gazed on a scene of perfect bliss. His young wife lay surrounded by flowers and with one hand on her infant's head. A desire arose in his heart to take the babe in his arms the last time before abandoning all earthly bliss. But this he might not do. The mother might be awakened and the prayer of the fond and loving soul might unnerve his heart and shake his resolution. Silently then he tore himself away from the blissful sight, the nest of all his joy and affection. In that one eventful moment, in the silent darkness of night, he left for ever his wealth and position and power, his proud rank and his princely fame, and more than all this the affection of a happy home, the love of a young wife and tender infant now lying unconscious in sleep. He left all this and rode away to become a poor student and homeless wanderer.

Questions :

- (1) What desire arose in Buddha's heart on seeing the blissful scene ?
- (2) Why did Buddha leave all this ?
- (3) What scene did Buddha see in his wife's chamber ?

The tide rises, the tide falls,
The twilight darkens, the curfew calls;
Along the sea-sands damp and brown
The traveller hastens towards the town,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

Darkness settles on roofs and walls,
But the sea, the sea in the darkness calls;
The little waves, with their soft, white hands,
Efface the footprints in the sands,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.

The morning breaks; the steeds in their stalls
Stamp and neigh, as the hostler calls;
The day returns, but nevermore
Returns the traveler to the shore,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.
